

How to report foreign interference

Ethnic Communities in New Zealand don't have to tolerate foreign interference. You can report foreign interference using the options below.

In an emergency

If it is happening now, call 111 and ask for Police.

If you can't talk and you are on a cell phone, stay quiet and listen for the 'press 55' prompt.

If you can't talk and you are on a landline phone, stay quiet and listen to the operator who will tell you to press any button for help.

Reporting foreign interference

We can all help keep New Zealand safe from foreign interference by reporting it to the NZSIS or the Police. No matter which way you choose, they will make sure your information gets to the right place.

Report foreign interference to the NZSIS

You can report foreign interference using the secure online form on the NZSIS website.

You don't have to give your personal information like your name, phone number, or contact details if you don't want to. You can also fill out the form in your own language.

If you want to talk to someone at NZSIS, you can call them on +64 4 472 6170 or 0800 747 224.

When the NZSIS sees your report, they will check it. If you leave your contact details, the NZSIS will only contact you if they need more information. If the NZSIS don't contact you, it doesn't mean they have ignored your report.

Report foreign interference to the Police

If it's not an emergency, you can contact the Police by:

- using the 105 online form;
- calling 105 from any mobile or landline, this service is free and available 24/7 nationwide.

The 105 form asks for some of your personal information to help the Police process your report and follow up with you. The Police only use this information for permitted purposes.
